In the Pursuit of Holistic Health

In our quiet moments, have we ever asked ourselves "Is there something of significance I am to accomplish with my life?" This question seems to arise out of a deep desire to make our lives meaningful and purposeful.

We, both as individuals and as a group, have consciously chosen to fill our lives with services to others, with hopes to heal others. Helen Keller said, "I long to accomplish a great and noble task, but it is my chief duty to accomplish small tasks as if they were great and noble." For most of us, it is the opportunity to do small things in great ways, rather than to accomplish one great purpose, that characterizes our lives. Our contributions at Northwestern and to the world, as we share the pursuit of holistic healthcare, are of that significance. When small acts of service are performed as if they were great and noble deeds the world is changed.
As you take your first steps as a new natural health care practitioner, your focus will naturally be on the days and weeks ahead. Building a practice, maybe moving to a new state, and raising a family will consume most of your waking moments as you pursue your dreams. But one day, years or perhaps decades from now, you will leaf through these yearbook pages and rekindle the emotions and thoughts that characterized your years pursuing a degree or certificate as a natural health care practitioner at Northwestern Health Sciences University. It is then that the value of this yearbook will become truly apparent. A certain picture, maybe of you in a hands-on class or of a classmate in the cafeteria, will transport you back years or decades to the very hallways of Northwestern.

At that moment, the value of your education at Northwestern will crystallize. In those years since you graduated, you will have treated thousands of patients. For many of them, your care will have lifted them from years of pain and suffering. You will have validated your decision to become a natural health care practitioner.

I congratulate you on your hard work and dedication over the last three-plus years at Northwestern as you sought to realize your dreams. When I think back to 1980, the year I graduated as a doctor of chiropractic, I can recall how happy I was to be out of school and opening a new practice in Sturgis, South Dakota. I lived for today and tomorrow. But now, nearly three decades later, I have time to reflect on my years pursuing a degree as a natural health care practitioner.

And what I realize is that my dreams have become reality, and I am able to be a member of one of the most wonderful professions in life – healing people NATURALLY – because of my education at Northwestern.

Good luck in the years ahead.

The Minnesota College of Acupuncture & Oriental Medicine at NWHSU offers two Master’s Degree programs. These programs are accredited by the Accreditation Commission for Acupuncture & Oriental Medicine and include a Master’s degree in Acupuncture and a Master’s degree in Oriental Medicine consisting of 2367 and 3057 hours respectively. Our graduates consistently score above the national average on the National Certification Commission for Acupuncture & Oriental Medicine board exams.

Both of our programs emphasize the unified understanding of the mind, body and spirit inherent in traditional Chinese medicine with the Oriental medicine program including the study of Chinese herbal medicine. We have gathered a multi-national faculty which is committed to academic and professional excellence and to teaching the extensive body of knowledge and skills necessary for safe and effective practice in today’s multidisciplinary environment. We pride ourselves on the relationships we have built throughout the medical community allowing many of our students opportunities for diverse clinical internships as well as providing employment options for many of our graduates. We continue to strive to provide the best possible education to our students ultimately benefiting patients and our profession.

In 2007, The School of Massage Therapy graduated its 300th student. This is a great milestone for a school with a short seven-year history. The year also saw a record-breaking incoming class of 50 students. Many factors lay claim to the credit for the success of this wonderful school. First, the faculty, some of whom have been at the school since it’s inception, are without a doubt one of the greatest assets of the school. Their passion for teaching and commitment to Northwestern and the high standards for the profession rank second to none. Second, the program itself has been designed with the highest of standards as the only acceptable benchmark. A strong foundation in the sciences creates a base which a student can develop into a skilled therapist. Similarly, the relaxation style massage learned in the first trimester lays the groundwork for the more clinically oriented techniques learned later. The professional studies series rounds out the curriculum by giving students skills in the communication, ethics, legal and business realms. Finally, the university environment, along with the other programs, offers the student a truly incomparable educational experience.

This is a very exciting time to be a massage therapist. The emerging public interest in natural and integrative approaches to health has created an environment in which the skills of a well-trained, clinically oriented massage therapist are valued more than ever. As an important piece of Northwestern, The School of Massage Therapy is proud to be training the next generation of massage therapists who will carry Northwestern’s vision of natural and integrative health care forward.

New Leadership
The chiropractic program is a 4200 hour program leading to the Doctor of Chiropractic degree. Our program is fully accredited by the Council on Chiropractic Education, which is the federal accrediting body for chiropractic education, and our graduates consistently score above the national average on the National Board of Chiropractic Examiners' examinations.

Chiropractic education is a dynamic process and we are constantly challenged to ensure that our program remains contemporary and that our graduates are prepared to practice in an evolving environment. For example, twenty or thirty years ago, most chiropractors practiced in one-doctor offices, often in their homes, and had quietly successful professional lives. Today's graduates must be prepared to practice in multidisciplinary environments and in a variety of multiple doctor settings, including clinics and hospitals.

We are placing considerable emphasis on the development of multilevel competency assessment program designed to ensure that our graduates are clinically competent to practice in any environment. Through curriculum development, integration and assessment we are positioning our program for continued leadership in the future.

Presidential Inauguration

President Mark T. Ziegler
Every year students and professors are nominated by fellow classmates and faculty in recognition of their achievements, and contributions to Northwestern Health Science University. The students and professors benefit from this award by being recognized as leaders within our community and for truly believing in natural health care and the mission of the school. In our 2006-2007 year book we pay special tribute to these individuals because they deserve the very best.

Teachers of the Year

Dr. Mary Tuchscherer started here at Northwestern in August of 1985. She came here from having taught at the College of St. Catherine for 2 years, and having just completed her graduate work in Neuroscience at the University of Minnesota Medical School. As time went on, she became more comfortable with her teaching load (Histology I, Neuroscience I, and Gross Anatomy Lab). She began asking herself: Gee, I wonder what this Chiropractic thing is? Being an over-achiever, she couldn’t just read about it, so she signed up to do the DC degree while maintaining her full time teaching load. She started in the Fall of 1988 and finished with her class in December of 1991. She learned a lot about Chiropractic in those years, and continue to learn more each day. It’s an amazing healing art, with a strong science foundation. She thinks her students appreciate the fact that she brings experience from her private practice into the classroom, especially to the Basic Science classes she teaches. She loves teaching, and she is so grateful to Northwestern and its students for this honor.

Dr. Pat is a speaker, writer, educator, holistic practitioner and spiritual director in the St. Paul/Minneapolis area. She is a chiropractor working in private practice and teaching. She is a full-time assistant professor at Northwestern Health Sciences University where she teaches in the classroom, in the cadaver labs, and online. Her teaching focus is anatomy, physiology, and related western clinical medicine courses for the MCAOM and Massage Therapy programs. She is also an adjunct instructor for Argosy University, teaching online human anatomy to students in psychology graduate programs, as well as clinical technician fields. Her work as a spiritual director includes one-on-one consultations, small retreats, and participation in the Befrienders program at St. Joan of Arc church in Minneapolis. Dr. Pat attended the University of Minnesota where she received her undergraduate degree in Psychology. She received a Master of Business Administration degree from St. Thomas University with a focus on organizational psychology.

Denise Radcliffe started teaching at Northwestern in September of 2001. Her love of teaching was cultivated in Ohio as an elementary and junior high physical education teacher. She attended the Florida School of Massage in 1989, then ran a small private practice for 9 years in South Minneapolis. She started to teach PE again at a small private Catholic school while maintaining a private practice. She then started teaching in the evening program in the massage department. She fell in love with teaching adults and strived for a higher standard for the profession of massage. She totally enjoys teaching here and loves her job. She continues to maintain a small practice that she believes enriches her ability to teach.

The ROCK

going involved...
The Mission of the Northwestern Health Sciences University’s Summer Science Academy is to advance and promote careers and opportunities in the health sciences through excellence in education, mentorship and community involvement.
Northwestern began its summer science academy three years ago, after noticing that few students of color were going into alternative medicine. One of the program's creators is Tolu Oyebowo, who teaches at Northwestern. She said the program aims to recruit students of color, and those who would be the first generation in their family to go to college.

"What the research suggested was that if we could get them as eighth graders, and those with some kind of interest in science or math, the likelihood that they would go to college would be higher," said Oyebowo. "And so we go into eighth grade classrooms, and we talk to their teachers, and we ask them not for their best students, but for students who with a little bit of mentoring, would be more likely to go to college."
